

Do I Need a Solicitor

TO WRITE A WILL?

A plain-English look at your options.

Most people don't need a solicitor to have a legally valid, properly drafted Will. Here's how to tell which route is right for you.

PROFESSIONAL WILL WRITING IS USUALLY ENOUGH

-  Straightforward estates
One home, savings and everyday possessions to pass on.
-  Simple family gifts
Leaving everything to a partner, children, or named family members.
-  Appointing guardians
Naming who should care for children under 18.
-  Updating an existing Will
Reflecting marriage, divorce, or a new addition to the family.

WHEN TO CONSIDER A SOLICITOR

-  Overseas assets
Property or investments held in another country.
-  Business ownership
Complex succession planning for a company or partnership.
-  Contentious families
A history of disputes that may lead to a Will being challenged.
-  Complex trust structures
Multiple trusts with unusual or bespoke conditions.

LEGALLY VALID

Correctly drafted & witnessed

LOWER COST

Than instructing a solicitor

PLAIN ENGLISH

No confusing legal jargon

UNLIMITED CHANGES

Until your draft is right

REFERRAL AVAILABLE

For unusually complex cases

Your wishes. Your legacy. Our purpose.

WILLS & ESTATE PLANNING SERVICES TAILORED TO YOU